Acquisition to add large group dental and vision benefit capability to Humana portfolio

LOUISVILLE, Ky.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--June 19, 2007--Humana Inc. (NYSE: HUM) today announced it has signed a definitive agreement to purchase CompBenefits Corporation, an Atlanta, Ga.-based dental and vision benefits company, for cash consideration of $360 million. The transaction will be financed through a combination of cash and debt.

CompBenefits is a leading full service provider of dental and vision benefit plans to more than 4.8 million members nationwide. The company serves more than 14,000 employer groups in 22 states, primarily in the South and Midwest. CompBenefits revenues for the year ended December 31, 2006 approximated $345 million.

"The addition of CompBenefits now gives Humana a full service vision product as well as added expertise in the large-group dental line of business," said Michael B. McCallister, president and chief executive officer of Humana. "When combined with our current HumanaDental business unit, this acquisition will give Humana the type of comprehensive integrated product offering that employers are seeking."

HumanaDental currently provides benefit plans to approximately 1.5 million members, primarily in 38 states. The company services more than 28,000 employer groups supported by a national PPO network with more than 97,000 dental office locations. HumanaDental's product offerings include dental indemnity and dental PPO.

"Humana's scale and distribution capabilities provide tremendous opportunity to cross-sell CompBenefits' innovative products," said Kirk Rothrock, president and chief executive officer of CompBenefits. "The acquisition of CompBenefits is an excellent strategic move by Humana as the combined dental organization will be well positioned to serve all customer segments."

"This acquisition supports our strategy of increasing value for our customers and expands Humana's dental portfolio to include dental HMO and dental EPO products that complement our current HumanaDental lines of business," said Jerry Ganoni, president, Small Business, Dental and HumanaOne for Humana. "Specialty product offerings on a voluntary basis fit well with Humana's consumer strategy. They create more affordable choices for consumers and help employers broaden their offerings to employees without additional costs to the employer."

The acquisition is subject to regulatory approval and is anticipated to be completed in the third quarter of 2007. The transaction is not anticipated to impact Humana's guidance for 2007 diluted earnings per common share, with accretion of $0.05 to $0.08 per share expected in 2008.
